The 100,000 Genomes Project

Participants - Would you like to become more involved?

You can make a difference

Thank you for joining the project. By participating you have already made a huge difference; helping patients now and in the future. There is a further opportunity for you to play a role in this pioneering project that will transform care in the NHS, for all.

We are looking for participants and their families to get involved. There may be opportunities to join activities in your local area, as well as nationally.

How can I help?

Would you like the opportunity to shape this project for future participants?

Here's how...

Share your story

We are looking for participants to share their story. Your story could be used on our website, in social media or in a leaflet to help others understand what it means to take part.

You could also share your story with the media. This might involve being interviewed for a newspaper, providing a quote for an article or being interviewed on radio or television. You would be supported at all times by the Genomics England team.

By volunteering to speak with the media you can help us to raise the profile of the project, and increase understanding into the importance of genetic research for cancer and rare diseases.

National Participant Panel

Genomics England have a national participant panel that works to ensure the interests of participants are always at the centre of the 100,000 Genomes Project. To find out more about their work, and how to join, please visit www.genomicsengland.co.uk/participant-panel/.

The group meet in London three times a year, or members can attend via teleconference.

Whatever time and support you offer will be very gratefully received.

Local activities

Your local hospital or Genomic Medicine Centre may have activities you can take part in.

This might be providing feedback on questionnaires or taking part in a focus group.

To contact your Genomic Medicine Centre, see the list at www.genomicsengland.co.uk/taking-part/genomic-medicine-centres/

It's always up to you to decide how much time you give or how much detail you want to give to anyone else about your participation in the 100,000 Genomes Project.
